
INSTRUCTIONS FOR AUTHORS (NETHERLANDS JOURNAL OF LEGAL PHILOSOPHY)

Frequency

NJLP appears two or three times a year and counts on average 100 pages per issue. Ahead of print, accepted papers are pre-published online at www.njlp.nl.

Formal criteria

Papers should be written in Dutch or in English (German or French) and should count between 6000 and 8000 words (footnotes included). In exceptional cases, longer pieces will be considered. Papers submitted to other journals will not be considered.

Selection Procedure

Papers should be submitted via Editorial Manager: www.editorialmanager.com/njlp. Book reviews should be submitted to the review editor, Luigi Corrias (L.d.a.corrias@vu.nl). For questions and author guidelines, please contact to the secretary of the editorial board, Lukas van den Berge (L.vandenberge@law.eur.nl).

Every submitted paper is first judged by two editors. In case the paper meets basic criteria in terms of form, topic and level of argumentation, it will be sent on for external review by two external referees. The review procedure is double blind. External referees have to judge whether the paper is (1) unconditionally acceptable, (2) acceptable after minor revisions, (3) should be rewritten and resubmitted or (4) should be rejected for publication in NJLP. In case the external referees disagree, a third referee can be asked to review the paper. Although judgments by external referees are very important, the final decisions are made by the editors.

Abstract, key words and biographical info

In case of acceptance, you will be asked to provide an abstract in English of maximum 120 words, 5 key words and biographical info stating your current academic function. After publication, authors receive a couple of author copies of the issue.

Spelling

NJLP accepts papers in both English and American spelling provided the same spelling is used consistently throughout the paper.

References

References are made in Chicago Manual Style (http://www.chicagomanualofstyle.org/tools_citationguide.html).

All references should be made in footnotes (no in-text references and no bibliographical list at the end of the paper). In case the full reference of a work has already been given in an earlier footnote, it suffices to state author and title of the work. Examples can be found below or in a recent issue of NJLP.

Book by one author

Wendy Doniger, Splitting the Difference (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1999), 65.

Book by two authors
